

Nezihe Muhiddin was a Turkish women's rights activist, suffragette, journalist, writer and political leader. The founder of the first women's political party, the People's Party of Women. The most important activist of the women's movement that emerged from the Ottoman Empire in the new Turkish Republic.

The executive editor of the journals, Kadın Yolu (Women Road -1925).

Nezihe Muhiddin was the leader of Turkish Women's Union that aimed to "raise womanhood to a modern and experienced level by uplifting them in intellectual and social areas". Just like her other occupations, she worked very productively for the benefit of the society. Muhiddin then founded Türk Kadınlar Birliği (Turkish Women's Union). Türk Kadınlar Birliği continued to press for political equality.

She spent her life working to improve the quality of the lives of Turkish women.

